Elephants counted from space for conservation project

By BBC Editorial Team

Elephants counted from space for conservation project
(2021, Jan 22)

Some scientists keep track of how animals are doing. In the future, they may have an easier way to do that. New technology allows them to use satellites to scan an area and count how many elephants there are. They will keep improving this technology. Hopefully, these satellites can count many different animals quickly in the future. This helps with animal protection and saves the scientists a lot of time.

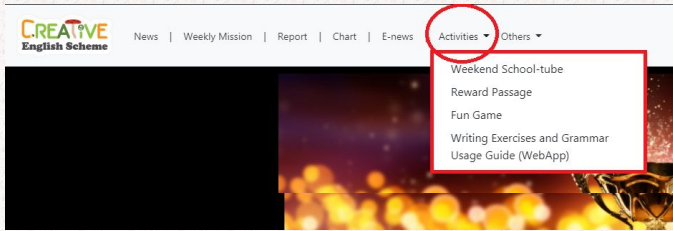

Glossary:

1. technology (n): the use of scientific discoveries. 科技
2. conservation (n): the practical, especially industrial, use of scientific discoveries, etc. 保育
3. habitat (n): the natural environment where an animal or plant usually lives. 棲息地
4. density (n): the number of things compared to the size of a place. 密度
